ATG Access

The Hepworth Art Gallery - Case Study

Location: Wakefield's Waterfront.

Brief: To provide stylish access control certified by anti-terror specifications to protect the pedestrians and visitors of the new Hepworth Art Gallery.

Solution: SP100 manual bollards certified to BSI PAS 68 standards.

ATG Access has successfully supplied a range of security bollards at the newly built Hepworth Gallery in Wakefield.

ATG Access was responsible for this waterfront site's perimeter security. The stylish SP100 manual bollards sit perfectly with this urban application. Both aesthetically pleasing and tested to internationally recognised standards the bollards are ideal to prevent unauthorised access to this busy visitor location.

The construction of this art gallery is part of Wakefield's waterside regeneration which was a fantastic project for ATG Access to be involved with. The gallery is the biggest arts development outside London for many years.

ATG successfully supplied the bollards after several on site visits and recommended the SP100 bollards as the most suitable for the low use application.

A local contractor installed the bollards who was already working on the gallery site and worked closely with ATG's recommended specification to ensure optimum delivery of the security solution.

ATG already holds multiple contracts with a variety of councils nationwide and hope to continue working on such exciting, local projects in the future.
