Nanterre Municipality in Paris - Case Study

ATG Access, high security bollards are successfully used to reduce drug crime in a Paris suburb.

The Nanterre Municipality in Paris required an increase in the level of security for one of its sensitive suburbs. The brief required ATG Access to control the suburbs entrance for deliveries and residents only. The suburb had suffered for a long time with drug crime.

Our local partner, France-Bornes, proposed SP400 Automatic bollards and an air lock system to control the entrance and exit of the area.

Representatives from France-Bornes and experts from ATG Access visited the site on several occasions prior to obtain planning approval and were able to advise on ways of making the scheme aesthetically pleasing as well secure.

ATG Access designed a specific system to match the requirement with a combination of CCTV and Intercom control. France Bornes arranged for the bollards to be painted by local suppliers with a specific red finish.

SP400 Automatic Bollards were used due to the product combining an aesthetic style with incredible resistance. The bollard can successfully arrest a 7.5 tons truck at 65km/h (PAS68 – K8). Please contact ATG Access for a copy of the crash test report if required.

ATG Access undertook all aspects of the project including management of the civil works and the commissioning of the system to guarantee perfect functioning. This allowed us to fully control the project and create business with prestigious clients.

The project was a complete success and the first time high security bollards have been installed for such an application. Many other sites will be equipped with the same success. And yes; bollards can even reduce crime and drug deals!!!

Location: Nanterre Municipality in Paris.
